LOT 1121

A Tibetan cast bronze figure of a healing horse, probably 16th century, modelled standing with left front leg raised, wearing a detachable prayer collar, height 14cm, length 16.7cm, with wood stand.

Provenance: from the estate of a West Sussex collector. Note: healing horses were more prevalent in China; they were used on human and animal patients to indicate the sources of pain. This figure is illustrated in Alain Presencer's 'Tibetan Buddhist Art', item 23, page 90.

Estimate: £500 - £800

Condition Report

1121. The horse is in good condition with no significant damage or repairs. Typical light surface scratches and wear. Attractive detail to mane and tail.
