Condition Report

The neck rim edge of the jar, where the cover sits, is quite roughly finished (during the manufacturing process) and heavily scratched. Please see the extra images on our website using the zoom function.

The jar and cover are in good condition overall with no cracks, chips or restoration, but there is some crazing to the glaze and a number of long noticeable lines visible to the glaze which would appear to be part of the manufacturing process - you can't feel them with your fingernail and nothing is visible to the interior - but they are quite visible once noticed, particularly under a strong light.

Otherwise the enamels and gilding are in good order with no signs of wear.
